Journey to the North of India: Overland from England Through Russia, Persia and Afghanistan

Arthur Conolly

The narrative of a overland journey that the author undertook from St.Petersburg in Russia to Hissar (a small town just North of Delhi, India) starting from London on the 10th of August 1829, the author makes his way from Russia to Tabriz and thence to Theran in Iran. It is from here that the author starts his narrative in detail. Traveling along the Southern shore to the Caspian Sea, the author makes an aborted attempt to reach the Central Asian town of Khiva; retracing his steps, he travels along the North of Iran and passes into Afghanistan to Herat. Traveling through Afghanistan, passing into North Baluchistan, he turns north from Khyrpur in Sindh and finally crosses into India to halt at Hissar on the 14th of Jan 1831. Arthur Conolly was a great gamer and his journey was a mission of reconaissance to access the possibilities of an overland invasion of India by the Russians and French. Along the route he describes the terrain and offers copious note of the people and their habits. The book and with a chapter on the history of Afghanistan and another chapter on an envisioned invasion of India a map illustrating the route accompanies the book. He was executed in Bokahra in 1842, along with a fellow officer Charles Stoddard. 19th century - Nineteenth century
