Darren Clarke: My Story Darren Clarke

Well-loved worldwide for his charisma and warmth as well as for being one of the most successful golfers of his generation, Darren Clarke's 2006 Ryder Cup successes following shortly after his wife Heather's tragic death from cancer cemented his place in the nation's hearts. Darren Clarke's career began a long way from the glamour of the major tournaments, working as a caddie for his father who was a course superintendent. This early experience sparked a passion for the game in the young Ulsterman, and he turned professional in 1990, at 22. Since then he has enjoyed a brilliant career, playing in five Ryder Cup tournaments for the European team, four of which were on the winning side. He also remains the only man apart from Tiger Woods to win more than one World Golf Championship event. A highly dedicated and competitive player, it is his work hard, play hard ethic that has won him friends among his greatest on-course rivals, and he is well known for enjoying post-match drinks with his U.S. counterparts as readily as with his European colleagues. Here he talks entertainingly about his fellow golfers, the competition on the field and the friendships off it, his own future in golf, and learning to live without Heather.
