Handbook of the Solar-Terrestrial Environment

As a star in the universe, the Sun is constantly releasing energy into space, covering a wide range of time and spatial scales, making the solar-terrestrial environment a complex system. The energy emission basically consists of three modes. The first mode of solar energy is the so-called blackbody radiation, commonly known as sunlight, and the second region were studied separately, but with the progress of solar electromagnetic emission, such as X rays of research, we realized the importance of treating and UV radiation, is mostly absorbed above the Earth's stratosphere. The third mode of solar energy emission is strong interactions between various regions within the solar-terrestrial system. On the basis of extensive satellite observations and computer simulations over the past two decades, it has become possible to analyze higher-energy particles, which are referred to as the solar wind and solar cosmic rays, respectively. solar-terrestrial environment.
