Not illustrated. 1866 Excerpt: ...small size. The fins and tail are of a dark hue, the dorsal fin extending over the greater portion of the back. Carp spawn about May, and are best caught from July to September; they have been taken in the Thames in January when the weather has been very fine. They prefer lakes and ponds to rivers, in some they grow to a large size. Salter mentions, one he saw taken from the pond in Wanstead Park, facing Tilney House, this he says appeared much wasted from age, but weighed then eighteen pounds. In Germany they attain a still larger size, but I do not remember to have seen one in England that exceeded twelve pounds. They are an extremely shy' fish, especially the larger ones, who seem to increase in craftiness as they do in weight and years. There is, however, no rule without an exception, for I have observed some splendid fellows in the ponds of the Palace Gardens at Versailles, who appeared to be perfectly tame, probably owing to being fed with bread crumbs by visitors. They are' not numerous in. the Thames; though I know of a few artful old Carp, who inhabit a certain deep pool at Weybridge, who appear to glory in their extreme wisdom, and will roll over the line, and appear to bid defiance to the angler. Late in the month of July, 1858, on a hot summer's afternoon, I was Barbel-fishing in the eddy off Ham Point, Weybridge; the water being quite twenty feet deep and as clear as glass. I did not so much as touch a Barbel, but took with my single rod, three magnificent Carp, weighing respectively eight, five, and four pounds; ten Eels, nine large Perch, and one Bream; the Carp gave quite as much play as Trout. These were all taken with the lobworm, using chopped worms for ground bait. As a general rule, the redworm will be found the most killing bait, but th...
