River Chase Ron Shepherd

In the early days of Minnesota, the first settlers were the river men who tamed the far north. There were trappers, farmers, and some men who made their living in the dark of the night. There were men who bought and sold as slaves, women, stolen from all over the globe. The descendants of these stolen women are still living in the far north of the state. This is a story of a man named Wil Morgan, the son of a sailing ship captain and a school teacher. He'd heard tales of the white slavers, but when they killed his mother, it became a chase to bring these men either to justice or hell, and he wasn't particular of which.
